CARNARON SPACE AND TECHNOLOGY MUSEM

THE CARNARVON Space and Technology Museum celebrates the little known history of the role Carnarvon played in the manned space program and in the Australian communications industry.

The museum focuses on two parts. The Carnarvon Tracking Station and the OTC Satellite Earth Station, for which each station played separate roles in the early space industry.

The Carnarvon Tracking Station was located 10 kilometres south from Carnarvon. The station was built to support NASA's Gemini, Apollo and Skylab programs. It was commissioned in 1964 and operated for 11 years. It was the last station to communicate with the space capsules leaving the earth orbit, and the last to make contact before splashdown in the Pacific Ocean. At the height of the operation it had a staff of 220 people.

OF NOTE:

- OPEN ALL YEAR ROUND
- OPERATED BY VOLUNTEERS
- ALLOW A MINIMUM OF 2 HRS
- COMMEMORATIVE COINS AVAILABLE
- OPEN 10 AM TO 2 PM 7 DAYS A WEEK.

Please take a tour of the website and make a donation or purchase a souvenir. All fees, purchases and donations help to keep the museum open. Enjoy! We know you will.
